

KARLA DICKENS

My Mother's Keeper

ACT NOW

As Indigenous Australians we connect with Country and refer to the planet as Mother Earth.

Recently a small group of First Nation Adults and children from different parts of Australia gathered in Bingara NSW to create a visual story.

Our short film speaks of our concerns and the importance of healing 'The Mother' with the help of our youth, who are our future and our only hope.

Known and respected for his great words Uncle Bruce Pascoe will not speak in this film - it is the viewers' responsibly to look hard, learn quick and listen deeply.

What will you see?

What action will you take?'

INTRODUCTION

In February 2019, Karla Dickens was invited to collaborate with Bruce Pascoe as part of a project called An Artist, A Farmer & a Scientist Walk into a Bar. The project was initiated by the Kandos School of Cultural Adaptation, an organisation committed to supporting creative practices that respond to cultural change across a broad range of disciplines¹. The work that Dickens and Pascoe produced focusses on the urgent need for us to protect and conserve the land and to cease the many destructive practices that are threatening our environment.

Over two days Dickens worked with Blacklock Media to make a film of Pascoe walking through Gamilaaraay Country near the town of Bingara in the north-east of NSW. Walking alongside Pascoe are a group of Aboriginal primary school students from Bingara Central School. The children represent the next generation, who must be equipped with the right skills and knowledge to implement positive changes to look after the land.

Pascoe's role in the film is that of Mother Earth. His silence throughout the film is a poignant signal that Mother Earth is displeased with our actions, and that we have not been listening. Dickens has explained that casting a male in this role highlights the need for men to also take a protective and nurturing position. Pascoe is wearing a jacket made by Dickens, inscribed with the words 'Mother Earth Country'. The children wear capes also made by Dickens, inscribed with words such as 'Listen', 'Care' and 'Culture'. Dickens has described the children as "little superheroes"² who can use the values written on their capes to save the world. The environment, motherhood and addiction have been recurring themes in Dickens' practice over the past 25 years. Her engagement with these topics is inspired by her own life experiences, though she deftly moves from the personal to the global. Dickens' work encapsulates broader social issues in a way that demands a reevaluation of how we judge other people, the values that we might take for granted and the way that we treat the natural environment only as a resource to support our own human addictions such as technology or power.

Dickens has been involved in environmental activism for most of her life. Having committed so much time to this issue, My Mother's Keeper is not overly optimistic. The mood of the film is sombre, and Pascoe delivers a brooding and downcast Mother Earth. The children represent the best way to move forward. The words on the children's capes denote the things that will be of vital importance in countering the environmental crisis that is currently affecting so many communities.

The team endured very challenging conditions during the filming of Mother's Little Helpers, including extreme heat and wind, as well as dust storms resulting from the lengthy drought affecting the area. At the completion of filming, it rained for the first time in 18 months, creating a rainbow. This was a fitting way to finish a project that is ultimately grounded in hope for the future.

MOTHER'S LITTLE HELPERS

By Karla Dickens

The deathbed rattles reality has arrived
with an offbeat heart
her veins die

Thirsty and hungry
no shelter to hide
screaming and crying
as water levels rise

No coloured pills
for mother today
overdosing on crooked Band-aids shakes from withdrawal stay

Battered and bruised
sweating in pain
the time has come to nurse her back

Too late for flowers
hold her hand
hug her tight
love her through long, dark nights

Sleepless chaos
no more fight
I see you, I hear you
I stand to fight

As mother recovers
looking unsure
and drained
she feels connection

Not blissfully
but respectfully
a world where humans
are brave enough to listen

An environment
that builds
trust in survival
where money is not the hero

Another realm
without excuses
hate or cunning
or self searching gain

Stay crazy for a minute longer imagine a sustainable future your heart full of hope and an openness to learn

Where governments and those in power make change
with a sense of intelligence and childish wonder

Let's keep tripping

Act now
